To safely leave their home, the patient needs assistance from another person and an assistive mobility device.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |

His medical history is significant for aortic stenosis, hypertension, hyperlipidemia, benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH), chronic kidney disease stage III, diabetes mellitus (pre-diabetes), anemia of chronic disease, osteoarthritis, left knee replacement, and a previous cervical spinal fusion 20 years ago. Prior to the recent procedure, the patient had been experiencing progressive bilateral lower extremity weakness, right upper extremity pain and weakness, falls, and difficulty ambulating. Upon assessment, the patient was alert and oriented x3–4 with occasional need for date prompts. His vital signs were obtained, lungs were clear to auscultation, bowel sounds were active, peripheral pulses were palpable in all extremities, and his skin was warm, dry, and intact, with small bruising noted on the right leg. He currently uses a cervical collar, which must be worn at all times during movement, and follows spine precautions including no bending, lifting, or twisting. The patient resides in a two-bedroom apartment with his wife, who is actively involved in his care and was present throughout the visit. The patient ambulated independently indoors using a rollator, with contact guard assistance noted. He continues to demonstrate limitations in right shoulder range of motion and strength, reduced right ankle dorsiflexion due to foot drop, impaired endurance, and decreased dynamic standing balance. Timed Up and Go (TUG) test was completed in 18 seconds, indicating a high risk for falls. He requires assistance with dressing and bathing and uses adaptive equipment, including a commode chair in the walk-in shower. He also utilizes an electric wheelchair for long distances. A home exercise program (HEP) was reviewed with the patient, emphasizing seated therapeutic exercises. The patient has access to an independent living facility (ILF) gym and has been educated on the proper use of equipment such as free weights, a recumbent bike, elliptical machine, and treadmill, which may be used in coordination with home therapy. Cognitive impairments are present, and he uses a memory/cognition book for support. Based on the current assessment, the patient would benefit from continued skilled therapy services to address strength, endurance, mobility, and safety, and to facilitate return to prior level of function.
