To safely leave their home, the patient needs assistance from another person and an assistive mobility device.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                            |                       |          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                  |
| Clinical Condition The patient is an 80-year-old female with a complex medical history significant for chronic obstructive pulmonary disease Requiring Homecare:(COPD), heart failure with preserved ejection fraction (HFpEF), atrial fibrillation, and cirrhosis. She resides with her son, who serves as her primary caregiver, in a first-floor living arrangement. The patient is designated as DNR/DNI, and all prescribed medications are available in the home. At the time of start of care, the patient is clinically stable with no signs of acute cardiopulmonary distress. <mh class="chrome-extension-FindManyStrings chrome-extension-FindManyStrings-style-14 CE-FMS-Oxygen">Oxygen</mh>ation is adequate on room air, with supplemental oxygen available for use as needed. A comprehensive head-to-toe assessment was completed, including cardiopulmonary and integumentary evaluation. Skin impairment was noted but is currently improving, with no evidence of active infection. The patient tolerated the assessment well and demonstrated understanding of education provided. Given her chronic conditions, the patient remains at ongoing risk for exacerbation of COPD and heart failure, as well as for further skin breakdown. Skilled nursing services are required for continued cardiopulmonary monitoring, early identification of exacerbation symptoms, management of oxygen therapy, skin assessment and treatment oversight, medication reconciliation, and patient and caregiver education. Interventions during the visit included medication review and reinforcement of education on disease management, including recognition of worsening respiratory or cardiac symptoms, proper use of oxygen therapy, safety precautions, and skin care strategies, including incontinence management and use of barrier creams.
