| Homebound status: After undergoing Right Total Hip Replacement surgery, the patient is experiencing decreased endurance and mobility, increasing the likelihood of falls. To safely leave their home, the patient needs assistance from another person and an assistive mobility device.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                  |  |
| Clinical Condition Requiring Homecare: The patient is a 71-year-old female admitted to home health services following an elective right total hip replacement, returning home the same day with family assistance. Her past medical history is significant for hypertension, hyperlipidemia, gastroesophageal reflux disease, hypothyroidism, chronic kidney disease stage 3, and atherosclerosis of the aorta. She resides with her husband, who serves as her primary caregiver, and currently ambulates with a walker. On assessment, the surgical incision was covered with a Mepilex dressing with physician orders to remove it on postoperative day seven and leave the incision open to air unless drainage occurs, in which case a dry dressing should be applied. The patient presents with postoperative pain, decreased right lower extremity strength and range of motion, impaired balance, gait dysfunction, and deficits in bed mobility and transfers, requiring assistance with all mobility and placing her at high risk for falls, making her homebound due to the considerable effort required to leave the home. Skilled nursing provided education regarding medication adherence, pain management, constipation prevention, personal hygiene, signs and symptoms of infection, edema management, lower extremity positioning, and postoperative precautions. During the visit, it was noted that the patient was wearing compression stockings but had not received instructions regarding cryotherapy; the nurse contacted the surgeon's office and was advised to instruct the patient to apply ice to the surgical site for 20 minutes on and 20 minutes off. The patient has an ice pack available from a previous surgery and verbalized understanding of these instructions. Physical therapy initiated a home exercise program consisting of ankle pumps, quad sets, heel slides, gluteal sets, seated long arc quadriceps exercises, and standing marching, with instruction on stair negotiation using a handrail and single-point cane, proper rolling walker sequencing, frequent ankle pumps for edema prevention, and removal of area rugs to reduce fall risk. A written home exercise program was provided, and the patient demonstrated understanding. Continued skilled nursing and physical therapy are medically necessary to monitor postoperative recovery, manage pain, improve strength, balance, mobility, and safety, and restore the patient to her prior level of independence while reducing the risk of complications and falls.<span |  |                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                  |  |
