To safely leave their home, the patient needs assistance from another person and an assistive mobility device.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                              |                       |                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                  |                 |
| Clinical Condition The patient is a 90-year-old male who was referred to home health services following hospitalization at an acute care facility Requiring Homecare:and a subsequent stay in a skilled nursing facility after sustaining an acute right cerebral hemisphere cerebrovascular accident (CVA). According to the patient's history, he experienced vomiting and diarrhea prior to the event, and his family heard him fall while walking to the bathroom. Emergency Medical Services transported him to the hospital, where diagnostic evaluation confirmed an acute infarct involving the right cerebral hemisphere. His past medical history is significant for coronary artery disease (CAD), status post coronary artery bypass graft (CABG), transcatheter aortic valve replacement (TAVR), atrial fibrillation, hypertension, hyperlipidemia, and right mandibular gingival cancer. The patient resides at home with his spouse, who provides daily assistance and support. Upon the Skilled Nursing assessment, the patient and his spouse were observed sitting on the porch upon arrival. The patient ambulated into the home using a front-wheeled walker. He was alert and oriented to person, place, time, and situation (A&O 4) and denied pain. The patient demonstrated the ability to ambulate with a walker but continues to require ongoing monitoring due to recent cerebrovascular accident, generalized weakness, and an increased risk for falls. Skilled Nursing services are medically necessary to assess neurological and cardiovascular status, monitor for complications related to the recent CVA and chronic comorbidities, reinforce medication adherence, provide education regarding stroke prevention, hypertension and atrial fibrillation management, fall prevention strategies, home safety, and recognition of signs and symptoms requiring immediate medical attention. A Physical Therapy evaluation was completed and revealed a decline in functional mobility compared to the patient's prior level of function. Prior to hospitalization, the patient ambulated with occasional use of a single-point cane and was modified independent with mobility. At the time of evaluation, he demonstrated generalized bilateral lower extremity weakness with muscle strength graded at 3-/5 on manual muscle testing. The patient requires minimal assistance for transfers and short-distance ambulation using a rolling walker and requires verbal cues to maintain upright trunk extension during gait. These deficits place him at increased risk for falls and limit his ability to safely perform functional mobility tasks independently. Skilled Physical Therapy is medically necessary to improve lower extremity strength, balance, posture, gait mechanics, transfer ability, endurance, and overall functional mobility with the goal of maximizing safety, restoring independence, and returning the patient to his prior level of function. The interdisciplinary plan of care includes ongoing Skilled Nursing and Physical Therapy services with continued patient and caregiver education, close monitoring of clinical status, and coordination of care to promote recovery, prevent complications, and reduce the risk of rehospitalization.<span |                                                              |                       |                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                  |                 |
