To safely leave their home, the patient needs assistance from another person and an assistive mobility device.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                 |  |

Her past medical history is significant for congestive heart failure with an ejection fraction of 35%, atrial fibrillation on anticoagulation, hypertension, gastroesophageal reflux disease, chronic kidney disease stage III, recurrent pleural effusions, history of cerebrovascular accident, gastrointestinal bleed, osteoarthritis, chronic pain, and hypothyroidism. The patient resides alone in a multi-level home and receives daily assistance from a home health aide for activities of daily living (ADLs) and instrumental activities of daily living (IADLs), with additional support from her daughter in the mornings and evenings. On assessment, the patient presents with bilateral lower extremity weakness, impaired dynamic standing balance, decreased activity tolerance, and altered gait mechanics. She demonstrates bilateral upper extremity strength of 4/5 on manual muscle testing. Functionally, she requires moderate assistance for sit-to-stand transfers and contact guard assistance for toilet transfers using a raised toilet seat with handles. She ambulates limited household distances using a rolling walker with contact guard to standby assistance, requiring frequent rest breaks due to fatigue and underlying cardiopulmonary limitations. The patient is unable to safely negotiate two steps to access the shower and is currently performing bathing activities at the sink. She sleeps in a recliner and requires assistance with bathing and dressing tasks. Bed mobility and transfers are significantly impacted by her weakness and endurance deficits. Dynamic standing balance is assessed as fair-minus, contributing to an increased fall risk. The patient also demonstrates notable anxiety during ambulation, expressing fear of falling and concern about rehospitalization; however, she remains cooperative and motivated to participate in therapy. Skilled physical therapy is medically necessary to address deficits in strength, balance, gait, and endurance, as well as to provide training in energy conservation techniques and safe functional mobility. Interventions will focus on improving transfer ability, ambulation tolerance, and overall safety within the home environment. Education was provided on fall prevention strategies, safe use of assistive devices, and pacing of activities to manage fatigue. The plan of care includes continued skilled therapy to promote functional independence, reduce fall risk, and enhance quality of life, with close monitoring of the patient's cardiopulmonary status and response to activity.Date of Order07/22/2026OrdersPhysician Face-to-Face Date: 03/12/2026Clinical Condition Requiring Home Care per Certifying Physician: PT and OT due to Acute lymphoblastic leukemia not having achieved remissionHomebound Status per Certifying Physician: patient requires another person or medical equipment such as crutches, a walker, or a wheelchair to leave home4 - Recertification Notes: |                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                 |  |

The patient is recertified due to bilateral lower extremity weakness, bilateral knee pain, impaired standing balance, decreased activity tolerance, altered gait mechanics, decreased functional mobility, difficulty with negotiating steps, unsteady gait, difficulty with transfers, history of decreased safety awareness, and increased risk for falls in the setting of CHF, atrial fibrillation on anticoagulation, recurrent pleural effusions, CKD stage III, osteoarthritis, chronic pain, hypothyroidism, and history of CVA. The patient requires a walker for limited household ambulation with frequent rest breaks due to fatigue and cardiopulmonary limitations and requires Mod A for transfers. Continued skilled home health PT remains medically necessary to improve strength, functional mobility, transfers, gait, balance, safety awareness, and stair negotiation to reduce fall risk, prevent further functional decline, and restore independence in the home.
